a POV film by Tod Lending

Having been in and out of prison for more than 30 years, but never out longer than six months, Omar and Pete are determined to change their lives. This intimate and penetrating film follows the longtime friends after being released. With extraordinary cooperation from Maryland's innovative reentry programs - many of which are run by former drug addicts and convicts - this film also provides a rare glimpse into the intense web of personal and systemic support afforded some former prisoners.
